

Find a property

Where to live

Blog

Search

← Fabric Review: Everything Everything at the 100 Club

5 stress-free tips for landlords →

Fabric loves... Stéphane Parmentier

Posted on July 25, 2011 by Lisa

Homebirds as we are, we're never ones to turn our noses up at styles from another city, so the partnership between renowned Paris-based interior architect Stéphane Parmentier and Ormond Editions at L&B London immediately piqued our interest.

The collaboration has seen Parmentier launch his first furniture collection entitled 'Altair' which, thanks to its speedy success, has been extended for its London debut with new forms exclusively designed for L&B. The accent stone and wood pieces are deliciously versatile, and can be used as stools, tables and bedside tables.

Stéphane Parmentier's fashion heritage (he was previously head of womenswear at Givenchy, and assistant to Karl Lagerfeld) is more than evident in the collection, as is inspiration from the world of aeronautics, with some forms directly inspired, of all things, by airport architecture from the 70s.

Altair will be launched and distributed through L&B London, 6/7 Motcomb Street, London, SW1X 8JU (020 7838 95 92, www.lblondon.com). Prices from £1,450.

Recent Posts

- Fabric loves... faking it.
- Fabric loves... Mary Portas at House of Fraser
- 5 trends in north London renovations
- 5 stress-free tips for landlords
- Fabric loves... Stéphane Parmentier

Categories

Select Category

Archive

- August 2011
- July 2011
- June 2011

Blogroll

- Ian Visits
- Londonist

Fabric tweets

- Never mind the bank-holiday rain – bronze your pins with the best fake-tan we've ever used... <http://t.co/X6DHf5l>